On the following morning we marched at 7 a.m. the Infantry having moved on ahead, at 8 1/2 a.m. we passed the Infantry and skirmished with the enemy for several miles. While halting near Bayou de la and awaiting the arrival of the Infantry & artillery our pickets were violently attacked by a superior force of the enemy and driven in, but by timely reinforcing them the enemy was handsomely repulsed and compelled to make a hasty retreat. On the following day Maj. Childers and one battalion pursued the enemy several miles but failed.
